

The guru of synthy-pop hasn't let up a bit. He's as active as ever. The young 68-year-old Jean Michel Jarre beguiles his public with high quality multimedia stage shows, bringing old and new songs, using old and new instruments. A nice addition to the troupe is the GRP A4 that has replaced the ARP 2600 at the side of the memorymoog in the middle of the action.

That instrumental smithy GRP (Groppioni Paolo) is proud, of course, that the A4 has found its way onto Jarre's stage. Especially because the concert in question took place in Rome - the old home town of GRP. The performance was part of Jarre's all-encompassing ELECTRONICA WORLD TOUR ...

Youtube Video: Electronica Tour Trailer ...

Further Info:

<http://jeanmicheljarre.com>