Being one of the neatest modular systems ever, the Roland System 100M was built from 1979 to 1984. This is a good sounding modular synthesizer which is still sought-after these days. Its VCOs and VCFs offer “the right mix of accuracy and analogue imperfection to give you a reliable but human sound”, as Peter Forrests says. This classic miniature modular system is used by Vince Clarke, Hans Zimmer and many other musicians …

We took some images of a 38-module System 100M …
